

CAUTION: SENIORS crossing

Overtaking the quad, seniors dressed as elders go off their rockers during brunch best dressed on generation day.

Students on the quad strike a pose for Spirit Week's generations theme, but seniors Cameron Toland and Julian Chow steal the show as they enter the catwalk in a motorized scooter and mobility cane.

To transform into their elderly disguise, Toland found inspiration from previous spirit weeks.

"[My inspiration] came from looking at people's past Instagram and talking with friends and brainstorming what we were doing. I felt like I was dressed similarly to a lot of my friends, but we all worked together to come up with good ideas. I took a trip to Goodwill with one of my friends to find some weird stuff."

With a plan, the senior best-dressed nominees began to put their looks together.

"I bought a cane from CVS, and I had white hairspray," Toland said.

"My grandma had this electric scooter so I borrowed it. I got my wig from a store and some glasses I had lying around. I got my shirt and shorts from one of my friends, and I just bought some really cheap shoes." Chow said.

Preparing for this year's Spirit Week, the Seniors were intent to make a statement.

"I think everyone goes the most full out senior year especially because it's like your last spirit week of high school, so everyone goes all out which makes it the most fun," Toland said.

"I thought all the other grades had really good outfits, but I think ours was the best and most put together," Chow said.

Unrecognizable, the two wow the crowd, and the judges, making the quad a sea of laughter--both young and old.

Students in each grade cheer excitedly during the rally on the football field.

ENERGIZED ELDERS

(cutout) Out on the football field, Kellyn Scheel ('23) pumps up her grade with a chant. "It's definitely hard to get the crowd going at rallies where there aren't any games, but with the spirit our grade has, we were still cheering the loudest," Scheel said.

CANES UP!

(dominant) Seniors rattle their walkers and canes together on the quad to show their senior spirit as they dance to the song "YMCA".

RESPECT YOUR ELDERS

(right) Strutting down the Quad, seniors Cameron Toland and Julian Chow entertain the judges and crowd in walkers and motorized wheelchair scooters. Toland and Chow were nominated for Best-Dressed for their grade. "This is the last real dress-up day of spirit week in high school for me, I wanted to go all out," Toland said.

SMILE! YOU'RE ON CAMERA! (above) Hunched over, Drew Nagesh ('23), cane in hand, greets Max Schrage ('23) on the quad. Nagesh and Schrage converse in a slow drawl. "Senior Citizens day was my favorite dress up day because we all acted the part and had a great time taking the theme as far as we could," Nagesh said.

WE ARE CLASS OF 25

(upper left) Cheering loudly, Sam Janik ('25) and Sam Helft ('25) invigorate the crowd with their sophomore spirit. "The Thursday rally was super fun, especially because I was with my friends. I also feel as though the sophomore class outperformed the juniors spiritually and we should have won," Helft said.

GET OFF OUR LAWN

(lower left) Shaking signs and canes, seniors Alden Backstrand and Willow Steele make themselves heard as they rally against other grades. "We all came dressed up and everyone participated with the cheers during the rally," Backstrand said.

PROFESSIONALS ON THE FIELD

(middle) All business-like, Declan Packer ('24) sports a pair of sunglasses as he participates in the rally. "The energy was absolutely electric and the juniors were super spirited this year which is a huge improvement from last year," Packer said.

BABIES, LET'S BE STRONG!

(right cutout) During Thursday's rally on the football field, the Freshman dressed up as babies, although in small numbers persisted. Freshman Aila Whiteley showed up at the rally to show support for her grade. "For next years rallies my grade will be able to do better because we know what we are doing now," Whiteley said.

REBELLIOUS SPIRIT

(right) During Thursday's lunch rally, Christian Saleh ('25) waves the '25 flag high and proud. "The Thursday rally was the best one...because Class of 25 had the most spirit during this rally," Saleh said.

dance off

With Zombie teachers, Varsity dance, and Cheer.

ZOMBIE Striking a fearful pose, teacher Eric Bloom embraces his inner zombie during the teacher's spirit week dance. "I felt fabulous in the moment, I have natural rhythm," Bloom said.

HANDS UP The varsity dance team worked hard to show off their talent at the Thursday spirit week rally. "We put in a lot of effort cleaning this routine, so I'm really glad how the performance turned out overall," Team member Ami Kaneko ('25) said.
