the season for SKIING

Skiing for over 10 years, Milo Sabina speaks on his experience and what the future holds.

Playlist blasting, a brisk breeze in the air. Milo Sabina skis down Whistler Blackcomb, one of the tallest skiing mountains in North America. Skiing has quickly become one of Sabina's favorite activities.

"It's such a unique sport that you can't really find in other hobbies or sports," Sabina said. Sabina appreciates skiing for its special qualities and how individualistic it is.

"My dad would hold me between his legs while I skied down the hill."
MILO SABINA
"I plan to continue it as a hobby and solely for my personal enjoyment," Sabina said.

For anyone who wants to learn skiing, Sabina suggests bringing a friend.

Additionally, Sabina was introduced to the sport around 2007 by his father.

"I started skiing when I was one or two years old," Sabina said. "My dad would hold me between his legs while I skied down the hill." Although Sabina finds the sport entertaining, professional skiing is not something he intends to pursue.
